The best argument for keeping cops out of schools is being made by police themselves when they tell us they won't do the job unless they can choke your kids. Did you know there is no special certification cops in schools are required to pass—like school nurses do?

Nurses also are licensed as health care practitioners, but to be a school nurse they're required to have special certification. Cops are not. How about you defend why cops should be allowed to choke kids?

Every police officer has to be licensed. They all have to pass the POST test. They don't use a choke hold. Any basic research would have discovered that. twitter.com/javimorillo/st... and this is what it's about. Absolute disdain for children and their parents. It's not that they want to choke your kids, they just don't want to get sued for doing it!

Trust me, that would likely be the first time those parents have stepped foot in their child's school.

we've seen it over and over again. if they can't police like they want to (choke your kids) they won't police at all.

And there you have it. These are the people defending cops going on strike to preserve their right to choke your kids. It's the Chauvin wing of the Republican Party.

George Floyd, before he got out of the SUV he was trying to drive (high, btw) was saying "I can't breathe." The cop used an approved technique (too long - yes, probably). It is debatable if the technique or the "speedball" (fentanyl + meth) killed GF. He had an overdose history.
